Dear Parents,

As we close one month and begin another, it is a valuable moment to reflect and renew our commitment to our children's growth. Each new month offers an opportunity to strengthen habits and guide our young Columbans towards becoming their best selves.

At St. Columba's School, we believe excellence comes through consistency in everyday actions. Two essential habits are regular attendance and neat personal presentation.

Regular attendance supports steady learning, builds confidence, and nurtures responsibility. When children attend school consistently, they remain engaged and develop discipline that benefits them both now and in the future. Irregular attendance, on the other hand, can lead to gaps in learning and reduced confidence.

Equally important is how a child presents himself. A neat appearance and proper uniform reflect self-respect, discipline, and pride. These habits, developed early, grow into confidence and a sense of responsibility that will serve them well in later life.

Children learn these values best by example. Your role as parents is not only to encourage but also to demonstrate these habits. When they see punctuality, consistency, and self-discipline at home, they are more likely to adopt the same.

As we begin this new month, let us work together to ensure that our children attend school regularly and present themselves with pride. These simple habits will help shape confident and responsible individuals.

With warm regards,

Br. Robert Fernandes
