Read the following passage and answer the questions given below:

A Devotee (Bhakt) is one who discards his personal attachment and surrenders himself to the Lord in relation to the Omnipresence of the supreme being, pervading the spirit and matter of the entire universe. Regarding Bhakti, 'Garud Puran' mentions that the word Bhakti is derived from the word

'Bhaj', which means service. The meaning of 'Service' is broader and more independent than the limited interpretations like rites and rituals of Seva'. In this sense, any activity of public interest done with dedication is also included.

All acts done consciously come under the term of Bhakti if they are done sincerely and with a spirit of absolute devotion. Bhagvad Gita explains Bhakti in this way. "Those who dedicate all their actions to me, regarding me as the supreme Lord, worshiping me and meditating on me with absolute devotion? The meaning of this verse is that we should perform all our actions or endeavours with the spirit that the God is the witness' and perform all our duties with an unshakeable determination that 'our action is to be dedicated to the Supreme Father God' so that action should be done effortlessly with a holy spirit.) - 3

For example, any food that comes to our dish from the kitchen is a meal, but when we offer the same food to God, it becomes Prasad (Gift or Blessing from God). When we cook daily, we should offer God; if we prepare food for the Lord with devotion, the cooking will effortlessly be full of Purity and Virtuous intent. Bhakti, hence, is the union of mental dedication with physical effort in all our Karma.
