Circular No.4 SMCS/06/2024

Dated: 30.08.2024

Dear Parents/Guardians

As a parent, you want your child to develop the confidence necessary to succeed academically, stand up to peer pressure, and feel good in his/her own skin. To accomplish this, here are some things you should do to your child.

Take care of Discipline: "The goal of discipline is to help the child learn to act right without you, and to learn from his/her mistakes," says Borba. All discipline should include a teachable moment where you show your child what s/he should have done differently.

Engage in Confidence: When a parent is confident, her children are more likely to be confident themselves.

Let your child be Independent: Sure, s/he's going to make a mess the first-time s/he feeds oneself with oatmeal. Let him/her. Making mistakes is part of the process of problem solving.

To the Students

Understanding oneself brings about a mountain of failures, whereas self-confidence facilitates the moving of that mountain. No one can do the things one thinks one cannot. The key factor behind lack of self-confidence is the 'fear of failure'. Winners do not fear failure, Failure is not the worst thing- the worst thing is 'not to try'

You can, if you think you can!

Four Beautiful Thoughts of Life
